

Carolina Wren

This tiny busybody is often our loudest neighbor, scolding us when we get too close to its nests.

These wrens have a lot to say and a lot to do--I have been quite impressed by how hard they work to build their nests and feed the little ones. They don't seem to be quite as impressed by me, though they are really curious about what I'm up to.

These guys come to my mealworm feeder and eat an amazing number of local insects.
